Notes

Ashio Narrow Gauge Railway Museum	Located in the old copper mining town of Ashio, the museum has a variety of old narrow gauge locomotives and rolling stock, including a large collection of petrol locomotives. It is operated by volunteers
Kiso (Akasawa) Forest Railway	A 2.2km section of what was once a 400~500 km network of 762mm forest railways in the Kiso area of Nagano Prefecture. Today the Akasawa Forest Railway and the connected museum operate / display a number of old diesel and steam narrow gauge locomotives
RASS (Rasuchijin Railway Association)	Is a volunteer organisation that builds, maintains and operates 762mm (mostly steam) locomotives. The association's objective is to let people enjoy travelling behind such locomotives rather than restore / replicate historical locomotives. This means that it has a variety of different engines. The Linesiding Club was well received by the association when it visited in 2024 and could enjoy seeing a variety of different locomotives operating.
Hiroshima Trams (Hiroden)	The second largest tram system in Japan, with 18.8 route kms but is top in terms of number of trams (133 tram units) and no of services. Although its oldest trams (survivors of the Hiroshima Atomic bomb) were retired from regular service in 2025, it still operates a mixture of old and modern trams.
Matsuyama Trams (Iyo Tetsu)	The Matsuyama tram network has 6.9 route kms and operates 38 tram units, which are a mixture of old and new. There is also a diamond crossing in the Otemachi area where light rail and heavy rail cross at right angles.
Kochi Trams (Tosaden)	Kochi has the longest tram network with 25.3 route kms and 61 tram units. As well as serving the Kochi city area the tram also reaches to neighboring towns of Gomen and Ino
Okayama Trams (Okaden)	The Okayama tram system is one of the shortest at 4.7kms and 22 tram units (but the two smaller ones are actually part of heavy rail routes). As we need to pass through Okayama a couple of times, it would be remiss not to see it. It is famous for its Chugginton Tram (sorry adults need to be accompanied by children to ride on it).

SL Paleo Express (Chichibu Railway)	Operates a C58 class locomotive and runs the 56.8km between Kumagaya and Mitsumineguchi. It is the closest steam service to Tokyo and one of the easiest to lineside as local trains catch up and pass the SL train.
SL Yamaguchi (JR West)	Uses a D51 class locomotive on what is a scenic route with some quite severe gradients along the JR Yamaguchi Line. (although you may see locomotive C57-1 listed, this locomotive is under long term repair).
Choshi Electric Railway	Choshi Electric Railway is famous in Japan for its “refusal to die”. Although its financial situation is very unstable, with the help of its local community the 6.4km railway line has continued to operate along the Inubosaki Peninsula in Chiba Prefecture. The railway company actually makes more money from manufacturing and selling its own brand of rice crackers, the proceeds of which help subsidise its railway operations. The company President is very passionate and even drives trains.
Oigawa Railway	Oigawa Railway is probably the closest that Japan has got to a heritage Railway. It is however a regular railway although it derives a large part of its revenue from tourists travelling on its steam hauled services and rail enthusiasts wanting to travel on its other “heritage” rolling stock (most of Oigawa Railway’s rolling stock can be described as heritage). Unfortunately a severe storm in 2022 caused substantial damage to its main line, meaning that trains can currently only operate on less than half the length of the line. Also Oigawa Railway currently only has one SL in operation which is used exclusively for its “Thomas the Tank Engine” specials. We will be travelling behind one of its heritage Electric Locomotives (ex Seibu Railway E31 class that has been painted in the JNR blue and cream livery.
